

Job opportunity:

Are you a veterinary technician with a passion for behavior? Veterinary Behavior Consultations is accepting applications for full time and part time positions. Full time technicians receive a great benefit package through the Central Hospital for Veterinary Medicine. Our present team includes two behavior technicians and Dr. Ellen Lindell, a board certified veterinary behaviorist. Cross training to other specialties is available but not required.

This position provides location flexibility—our behavior technician may choose to join us in one or both of our offices. Our practices are based in Westchester County, New York and North Haven, Connecticut.

The behavior technician's duties include assisting the doctors during behavior consultations, scheduling behavior appointments, creating written material including letters and handouts, teaching clients to implement behavior modification techniques, educating veterinary health care teams, and enhancing our behavioral well-care program.

Skills required:

Excellent oral and written communication skills

Ability to assist doctors during a physical examination

Understanding of behavior modification theory and applications

Basic computer skills

Ability to work independently and solve problems creatively

Ability to organize

Attention to detail and accuracy

Preference will be given to applicants with clinical experience in applied animal behavior and to licensed veterinary technicians. If you are interested in this position but are not a licensed or registered veterinary technician, please submit a letter detailing the nature of your education and experience. We will consider applications from qualified individuals with a strong background in applied animal behavior.

Salary is commensurate with experience. Fear Free certification and SVBT membership will be provided upon hiring.

If you are interested in joining our behavior team, please send your resume to Dr. Ellen M. Lindell, info@lindellvetbehavior.com.
